Featured this Season

New Sunday matinee series, Pathways

This new concert collection features a unique 90-minute format, with one hour of fantastic music followed by an intriguing on-stage discussion with Paavo Järvi and CSO musicians, moderated by classical hosts from WGUC.

Season opener with Lang Lang—one night only

The CSO raises the curtain on the 2009-10 season in spectacular fashion with pianist Lang Lang performing Beethoven's Second Piano Concerto on September 17. Subscribers have the first opportunity for the best seats to this sure-to-sell-out concert.

Made in America

From Copland to Gershwin, from Barber to Bernstein, Paavo Järvi and the CSO perform four concert weekends celebrating major American composers and their music.

Paavo's Picks

Paavo has selected eight great concerts featuring undiscovered gems, new perspectives or rising star soloists that you simply can't miss. Save 25% on any Paavo's Pick added to your subscription collection.

In each performance there is revelation—for me, the musicians and for the audience. Together we discover in music, whether it is new or familiar, something powerfully moving, enriching or even unexpected. And in the process, we discover something about ourselves. Come join us.

“My wife and I enjoy our ‘Saturday evening ritual,’ as we call it. We usually make dinner reservations with fellow subscribers we’ve met over the years and we always know there will be composers and music that we love. I like watching the musicians to see what sounds are coming from which instruments. Letting the music wash over us in a live concert is one of the reasons we come. It’s relaxing but it’s also fun.”

“I think Music Hall is the place to be. I remember the first time I came—I never get over the beauty and grandeur of it all. Where else in Cincinnati can you have a big city experience like this? The music is exciting, and the soloists they bring in from all over the world are thrilling to watch. The best part? We take advantage of the pre-concert wine tastings, and I get to have a romantic evening with my husband.”

“For me, going to concerts expands my cultural horizons. I love the classics, but I also occasionally like to hear something that surprises me. I often introduce friends to the symphony, but sometimes I come alone just to absorb the music. The open Green Room after the concert is a great way to meet the conductor and soloist. I’m proud to have a world-class orchestra to call my own.”

“The Thursday night concerts are a great way to relax with my friends. I have a casual work environment, and I don’t need to worry about changing clothes before I go. The free buffet before the concert means I don’t have to rush to get dinner on the table. The music is always outstanding. And it’s an affordable date night—where else can you get dinner and a show for as little as $10?”

wguc 90.9

Be a CSO insider with the exciting new series, Pathways. Each 90-minute program features approximately one hour of music, followed by an engaging and entertaining conversation from the stage with Paavo Järvi and CSO musicians. Get a completely new perspective as you learn how the musicians approach the music. Hear captivating stories about composers and their lives. And discover the elements that give each composer his own unique voice.

“I don’t know a lot about music, but my son plays in his school orchestra. We’re both excited about the new Sunday matinee series with the post-concert discussions from the stage. It’s fun to learn interesting things about the music, and I feel like it will give him an advantage in life that he can’t get anywhere else. It’s also a chance to spend some real quality time together.”
